Professional Conduct

Statement of Policy:

The Academy seeks to provide a safe and supportive environment, which secures the well-being and very best outcomes for children in our care. Staff can at times feel vulnerable in trying to achieve these aims, and as such, guidelines on professional conduct are vital. The Academy is committed to supporting all staff to minimise the risk of being accused of improper conduct towards the young people with whom they come into contact during their working hours. Additionally, the expected standard of conduct amongst staff is high and staff need to understand that they are expected to act as role models for young people and be mindful of the reputation of the Academy.

The aim is:

- to ensure a high standard of professional conduct amongst staff to safeguard children and protect staff from allegations
- to ensure that the duty of care towards pupils and staff is promoted by raising awareness of illegal, unsafe and unwise behaviour
- to ensure that staff exercise professional judgement appropriate to a professional in a 'position of trust'
- to assist staff in monitoring their own standards and practice and work in a transparent and professional way

Procedures

Private meetings with students

All staff should be aware of the dangers which may arise from private interviews with individual students. It is recognised that there are many occasions when confidential interviews take place but, where possible, such interviews should be conducted in a room with visual access, or with the door open, or in a room or area which is likely to be frequented by other people. Where such conditions cannot apply, staff are advised to ensure that another adult knows the interview is taking place. The use of 'Do Not Disturb' signs is not advisable. Where possible, another student or another adult should be present or nearby during the interview. Meetings or contact (phone calls, texts, emails) with students away from the school premises (or indeed on the school premises out of hours) are not permitted unless the specific approval of the Principal or Vice Principal has been obtained in advance. Staff must recognise that a relationship between a member of staff and a student cannot be a relationship of equals. There is a potential for exploitation and harm of vulnerable young people and staff have a responsibility to ensure that an unequal power balance is not used for personal advantage or gratification.

Peripatetic Lessons

In order to maximise learning and progress, many peripatetic lessons are carried out in a one to one situation. In order to protect children and staff, these are always carried out within the school day at a pre-arranged time in a designated area. All peripatetic rooms have a glass door. Staff are trained in Child Protection procedures and are aware of their duty of care and expected code of conduct.

Confidentiality

Members of staff may have access to confidential information about students. This information should never be referred to casually or in order to humiliate or embarrass a student. Highly sensitive information should only be shared on a 'need to know' basis at the direction of the Named Person.

Propriety and Behaviour

All staff have a responsibility to maintain public confidence in their ability to safeguard the welfare and best interests of young people. They should adopt high standards of professional conduct in order to maintain this confidence. This includes attention to dress, appearance (see page 7) and self-expression and thinking about how they conduct their professional relationships with other members of staff. Standards may well vary from those adopted in their private life. Additionally, staff need to think carefully about the way that they present themselves on Social Network Sites and the image of themselves and the Academy that they may be portraying.

Staff need to be aware that it is not uncommon for students to be strongly attracted to members of staff. Any situation should be responded to sensitively to maintain the dignity of all concerned. If you are aware of an infatuation involving yourself, or another, you should report it to the Senior Vice Principal.

Sexual Contact with Young People

Any sexual behaviour by a member of staff with or towards a child or young person (up to the age of 19 in their care) is both inappropriate and illegal. Young people are protected by specific legal provisions regardless of whether they consent or not. Sexual activity does not just involve physical contact, it may also include causing children or young people to engage or watch pornographic material. Staff should be aware that conferring special attention and favour upon a child or young person might be construed as being part of a 'grooming' process, which is an offence (Sexual Offences Act 2003).

Caring for students with particular problems

Staff who have to administer First Aid should ensure whenever possible that other students or another adult are present if they are in any doubt as to whether necessary physical contact could be misconstrued.

Wherever possible, staff that have to help students with physical disabilities should be accompanied by another adult.

Where physical contact may be acceptable

There may be occasions when a distressed student needs comfort and reassurance which may include physical comforting, such as a caring parent would give. Staff should use their discretion in such cases to ensure that what is, and what is seen to be by others present, normal and natural, does not become unnecessary and unjustified contact, particularly with the same student over a period of time. Where a member of staff has a particular concern about the need to provide this type of care and reassurance, he or she should seek the advice of the Principal or Senior Vice Principal.

Some staff are likely to come into physical contact with students from time to time in the course of their duties. Examples include showing a student how to use a piece of apparatus or equipment and demonstrating a move or exercise during games or PE. Staff should be aware of the context within which such contact should properly take place and of the possibility of such contact being misinterpreted.

There may be rare occasions where it is necessary for staff to restrain a student to prevent him or her from inflicting damage on themselves or others. In such cases, only the minimum force should be used in order to restrain. In most cases of a student refusing to leave a room, or absconding, the student should not be physically handled. Report the incident immediately to the Named Person. The only grounds to physically intervene would be if it was genuinely believed that the student was at risk to themselves or others. Physical force must never be used as a punishment, or to modify behaviour, or to make a student comply with an instruction. Staff are advised that physical force may, in law be regarded as an assault (see Care and Control of Students Policy). It is accepted guideline that any complaint of inappropriate handling by a student (proven or otherwise), should be reported to the Local Authority Designated Officer for Child Protection (LADO). Following an investigation, it may be that information is passed to the Independent Safeguarding Association.

Gratuitous physical contact with a student

Physical contact may be misconstrued by a student, parent or observer. Such contact can include well-intentioned formal or informal gestures such as putting a hand on the arm or shoulder which, if repeated with an individual, could lead to serious questions being raised. Therefore, as a general principle, staff should not make gratuitous physical contact with students and it is unwise to attribute touching to their teaching style as a way of relating to students.

Where conversations of a sensitive nature may be appropriate

Many staff have a pastoral responsibility for students and in order to fulfil that role effectively, there will be occasions when conversations will cover particularly sensitive matters. Staff must, in these circumstances, use their discretion to ensure that, for example, any probing details cannot be construed as unjustifiable intrusion.

All staff may, from time to time, be approached by students for advice. Students may also appear distressed and staff may feel the need to ask if all is well. In such cases, staff must judge whether it is appropriate for them to offer counselling and advice or whether to refer the student to another member of staff with acknowledged pastoral responsibility for the particular student, i.e. Form Tutor, Head of Year, the Academy Nurse or Individual Needs. Staff must remember that discretion can never be guaranteed and anything of concern must be referred to the Named Person (see Safeguarding and Child Protection Policy).

Inappropriate comments and discussions with students

As well as physical contact, comments by staff to students, either individually or in groups, can be misconstrued. As a general principle, therefore, staff must not make unnecessary comments to and about students or other members of staff which could be construed to have a sexual connotation. It is also unacceptable for staff to introduce or encourage debates amongst students in class, or elsewhere, which could be construed as having a sexual connotation that is unnecessary, given the context of the lesson or the circumstances. At the same time, it is recognised that a topic raised by a student is best addressed rather than ignored. Additionally, jokes of an 'adult nature' with sexual connotations should be avoided.

Systematic use of insensitive, disparaging or sarcastic comments is also unacceptable. As is drawing attention to any of the students' physical attributes, even in a positive manner.

Choice and use of teaching materials

When using teaching materials of a particular sensitive nature, staff should be aware of the danger and that their selection could be misinterpreted and may be criticised after the event.

General relationships and attitudes

Staff should ensure that their relationships with students are appropriate to the age and gender of the student, taking care of their conduct does not give rise to comment or speculation. Attitudes, demeanour and language all require care and thought, particularly when staff of either sex is dealing with adolescent boys and girls.

Staff should be aware that some actions might be construed as sexual harassment.

Educational visits and extra-curricular activities

Staff should be particularly careful when supervising students on residential activities. They should always ensure that the male to female staff ratio is adequate for the effective supervision of both sexes. Similarly, the less formal approach adopted in extra-curricular activities generally can be open to misinterpretation. Although more informal relationships in such circumstances tend to be usual, the standard of behaviour expected of staff will be no different from the behaviour expected within Academy. Staff acting in any supervisory capacity should not drink alcohol in the presence of students or when on duty.

Staff should ensure that;

- They take responsibility for their own actions and behaviour and always question whether their conduct is professional (would you say/do that in front of a parent/Governor?)
- they work and are seen to work in an open and transparent way
- act and be seen to act in the child's best interests

- avoid conduct which would lead any reasonable person to question their motivation and intentions
- take advice from appropriate persons if in any doubt about actions taken or to take
- discuss any misunderstandings with SMT (in the first instance the Senior Vice Principal)
- identify and report any areas of risk or vulnerability
- remove themselves from situations where they may be at risk from allegation
- report concerns regarding self (eg suspected student infatuations)
- report concerns regarding colleagues (see Whistleblowing Policy)
- records should be made of any incident that occurs
- work to the same professional standards regardless of gender or sexuality
- consider the reputation of the profession and Academy when using Social Network sites, including their interaction with other members of staff

Personal views and beliefs

All teachers have a duty to ensure that students have a broad and balanced education. It is important this is remembered when planning individual lessons as well as in the overall curriculum design. When dealing with or teaching about political, religious or other sensitive issues no personal beliefs should be imposed upon a student. Students should be enabled to make informed decisions and draw appropriate conclusions from being given balanced and reliable information. Any visitor or speaker allowed to deliver sessions to students should be made aware that they have to present balanced and accurate information and the content of any external presentation must be checked before it is delivered. A member of the SLT must be consulted before agreeing to allow a speaker / visitor into the school.

Contact with students outside school

As a general rule, conversations either by telephone, text or Social Networking sites with students at the Academy are inadmissible. If a member of staff has any reason to give any private contact details (for example their private mobile number) to a student, they should inform the Senior Vice Principal. Private communication is open to misinterpretation and may lead the member of staff to gain a bad reputation or lead to an accusation of unprofessional conduct. Staff should also think carefully about how they present themselves on any social networking website profile so as not to undermine their professional reputation. Informal meetings with students outside of school should be avoided, unless there is family involvement (eg an 18th birthday party where parents are present) or it is an organised occasion (eg the Post-16 Formal, a reunion party with other members of staff present, a leaving meal for Post-16 students with other members of the department present). If a member of staff is in any doubt about the appropriateness of contact, they should seek advice from the Senior Vice Principal.
